Create cool timetables for your kids Setup keeps you busy only for a little while, and the last step even offers to run the program for you. Note that it takes up your entire screen, but this isn't necessarily an inconvenience, because it allows you to clearly view and manage all functions. Don't be discouraged by the layout, because there are multiple ones to choose from, even though they might seem childish. Everything you see in the design is what you get as output, except for the settings panel. There are different types of background images to choose from, while the table itself can be fitted with different colors for time values, as well as available days.

Unfortunately, you can't position or resize the table itself. Edit and export options By default, you work with a 6x6 table, but the application allows you to easily specify the number of rows and columns, although the columns number can't be greater than 7, since there are only so many days in a week. Editing is done on the spot just like in a regular spreadsheet table cell. On the bright side, you can also modify the headers for days of the week, which means it can be used as more than an app to create timetables for schools. Saving isn't possible as an image, but you can print the design on a sheet of paper. In conclusion Taking everything into consideration, we can state that ABC Timetable is a cool little app you can use to create a neat timetable for your youngster, or even for your own daily schedule. Various designs can be used, while the table itself can be customized almost entirely.
