Piperlongumine is a piperidine alkaloid found in Piper nigrum (black pepper) and has demonstrated anti-proliferative effects against a variety of tumor cells. In this study, we demonstrate that piperlongumine inhibits proliferation and induces apoptosis in the human colonic adenocarcinoma cell line, Caco-2. Treatment of Caco-2 cells with piperlongumine led to a dose-dependent decrease in the growth rate, indicating that piperlongumine was effective in inhibiting Caco-2 cell growth. Cell cycle analysis indicated that piperlongumine induced G2/M phase arrest and apoptosis of Caco-2 cells. In addition, piperlongumine induced the expression of pro-apoptotic proteins (Bax, p53, p21 and cleaved caspase-3), and reduced the expression of the anti-apoptotic protein, Bcl-2, demonstrating that piperlongumine induced Caco-2 apoptosis through the mitochondrial pathway. Our results also revealed that piperlongumine inhibited telomerase activity by decreasing the expression and activity of hTERT in Caco-2 cells, which may be important in the control of telomerase activity.7814.996538 +/- 0.003501. Zhao et al. [zhao2019unreasonable] also pointed out that a wrong sample set may cause the prediction model of a model to appear unreasonable. In this work, the improper training sample set will result in unreasonable predictions of the waveform files. To overcome this issue, their approach improved the ability of correcting, compared to the one in [qin2018cascaded]. In their work, even though a sample set is relatively small, it seems to be large enough to ignore the influence of irrelevant samples on the final predicting result. Conclusion
